A Thrilling Incident.

It was late in the evening of a lovely apring day. The flocks were grasing quietly on the meadows, and the sun pouring his last flood of light upon lawn and landscape of a lovely land as I entered the residence of her to whom my heart was plighted. She met me with a warm smile. I clasped both her saft delicate white hands in mine, and my tongue began to pour forth the horage of a heart all tenderly and devatedly her own. "Adorable empress of my soul," said I ,"sweet course and circumference of all the colleted perfections of sucharine feminity, deign in thy gradulation, the following advice to his countrymen to stand by and stick to their stricken country in its hour of tribulation, trial and adversity. Few men have not felt the first promptings of a desire to flee from a country where there fiberty and rights of equality have been ravished from shem by the sword. But we have seen none who truly loved their country, who have not reconsidered the thought and abandoned it from

have seen none who truly loved their country, who have not reconsidered the thought and abandoned it from the sense of duty inculcated by the gallant General Hampton. Like the Roman, whose example he cities, he does not despair of his country. Nor ought any Bouthern man to do so. The present dark cloud will pass away, and the force trisls and sacrifices of the past four years shall yet surely bear their fruit and give this section and people an honorable and a potent place of influence in the future councils of the mation:

danger, nor those who have worshipped Mammon while their country was bleeding at every pore; nor the politician, who, after urging war, dared not encounter its hardships; but those who laid their all upon the after of their country. Select such men and make them your representatives. You will not be wantonly sacrificed, nor your liberty bartered for a mess of pottage. My intention is to pursue the course I recommend to others.

Besides the obligations Towe to my State, there are others of a personal nature which will not permit me to leave the courtry at present. I shall devote myself enemently, if allowed to do so, to the discharge of these obligations, public and private. In the meantime I shall obtain all information which would be desirable in the establishment of a colony, in case we should ultimately be forced to leave the country. I invoke my fellow citizens, especially those who have shared with me the perils and glories of the past four years, to stand by our State manfully and truly. The Roman Senate votes themke to one of their generals because, in the darkest hour of the republic, he did not despair. Let us emulate the example of the Roman, and thus enstitle ourselves to the gratifical courselves to the
